Latest News Poll Shows:

Public Backs Steel's Fight On Inflation

Readers of the San Francisco Chronicle, one of the nation's leading newspapers, recently were invited to give their opinions on major issues in the steel strike. The results of the poll, and an accompanying editorial, are reproduced here with permission of The Chronicle.

The opinions expressed were overwhelmingly in favor of the steel companies' determined opposition to the inflationary wage demands of the Union leaders. The results agree with surveys by newspapers in other parts of the country, and by independent opinion research organizations.

Clearly America wants a non-inflationary settlement of the steel strike.

Public Opinion On Steel Strike

PUBLIC OPINION in Northern California, as revealed by respondents to the August 10 Chronicle Poll, runs in favor of management arguments and against union arguments in the steel strike.

The strength of popular agreement with management's case in the dispute can be seen in a glance at the percentage figures on the ballot in the adjoining columns. We confess to some surprise at the fact that the tide of opinion should run against labor's case in every one of the first five categories, but that is surely what the responses indicate.

For example, 47 per cent say the union bears the main responsibility for the failure to reach agreement prior to the outbreak of the strike. While this is short of a majority of all votes, it is still almost double the percentage of those who feel management was responsible.

One of the most decisive votes on the entire ballot shows 62 per cent disagreeing with the union contention that wages should be raised to offset the rise in living costs. Almost exactly the same percentage agrees with management's contention that wage increases demanded by the unions would seriously aggravate inflation. Sixty-six per cent feel that, if granted, wage increases would create a pattern for inflationary demands in other industries.

The steelworkers' union leadership clearly believed that when the announcement of record steel profits hit the public, it would strengthen the argument for a wage increase. Yet the poll shows only one-third thought this high-profits argument valid, while more than half thought it irrelevant.

The great majority agrees that the Government should not intercede to settle the strike by using its full powers under the Taft-Hartley Act. This is covered in point 6. It is the only point on the ballot on which the views that have been expressed by the union clearly prevailed.
